This unique tour of the northern Iberian Peninsula starts with the Douro Valley—and its centuries-old hillside vineyards—and eventually delivers us to Cape Finisterre. In Roman times, Cape Finisterre was believed to be the “end of the known world.” Along the way we visit The Peneda-Gerês National Park, which is the first and only protected area to be established in Portugal. Its rugged hills are home to deer, wolves and golden eagles and beautiful waterfalls. Our road also takes us to the snowy peaks of the Picos de Europa National Park—the first National Park in Spain and also a designated UNESCO Biosphere Reserve. The historic cities of León, Oviedo and Santiago de Compostela are on our route, as is the scenic Costa da Morte—so named because there have been so many shipwrecks along its treacherous rocky shore.
